

We first made contact with Devrite Homes of Distinction after reading an article in the New Homes supplement to the West Australian newspaper. We asked if we could view some of their work and were most impressed by the quality of the three homes visited. What was more important to us was the excellent relationship that we could see between Ron and Jay Mangano and their clients.

We started the design process with many ideas and a brief to achieve an environmentally sustainable house which would cater for our needs as we age. Ron and Jay together with Dean Bell their designer, worked tirelessly and patiently with us to develop a plan to satisfy our wishes and to use our block of land to advantage. They provided unlimited information about the choices of materials and construction options. Realistic pricing was discussed with us at an early stage. This gave us complete confidence to enter into a contract.

From the very first stage of construction the supervision was way beyond that which we could have expected. It was as if it were Ron and Jay's own home. We were advised of each step in the building process and were welcomed on site at any time. Ideas regarding possible changes were warmly welcomed and discussed to achieve the best outcome. We greatly appreciated this process as it avoided the need to make all decisions before commencement. Ron and Jay were always available to answer phone or email queries.

The quality of workmanship by the team of skilled tradespeople could not be faulted. Their work surpassed all our expectations. Knowing that these people had a long history of working with Devrite was reassuring and they were all so pleasant and helpful to us. Ron and Jay's aim to provide a home that is virtually maintenance free has been achieved. The house is so comfortable to live in and has required no heating in the recent winter. The many, many compliments we receive about the house and the way in which it was built are testament to the fine work of Devrite. The minor faults with products used in the house were dealt with promptly and efficiently.

It was the small acts of kindness which really made such an impression. For instance a letter of introduction was sent to our near neighbours just before we moved in to our new house. On one occasion Ron and Jay set up a takeaway dinner in our living room to be, so that we could see the newly installed lights at night time.

Since hand over Ron and Jay have stayed involved with the development of the property by personally assisting with all aspects of the reticulation and landscaping. We were so grateful to them for spending the whole day helping us to move into our new home.

We are now enjoying living in an exceptionally beautiful home and have countless happy memories of a great building experience.
